About Conference

Viksit Bharat @2047 is a mission launched by the Honourable Prime Minister of India to make India a developed country by 2047. The year 2047 will mark a hundred years of freedom from the colonial rule. A century of nation building involves the dedication and efforts of everyone; the contribution of writers being very significant. The role of writers goes beyond the traditional role of storytelling. Writers narrate history, collective memory, culture and civilization of a country. Whereas media, the fourth pillar of a nation, shares the responsibility of educating, entertaining, creating awareness and critiquing policies. This conference aims to provide a platform for research scholars, faculty and media professionals to present their ideas on how literature and mass media can contribute to fulfilling the dreams of a nation. Papers are invited on the themes given below; but contributors can also explore other areas related to the main theme of the conference:

- Role of Literature in Nation Building
- Nationalist Literature
- Nation and Narration
