Raipur - the Capital City

The city of Raipur is the capital of Chhattisgarh. It not only represents the administrative, Educational, business and industrial seat of the State of Chhattisgarh, but also of the entire region. In its immediate neighbourhood lies the Steel city of India-Bhilai, where one of the Asia's largest steel plants is located. In the South of Raipur the Tribal heart of India- Bastar, where the tribal culture and art are still preserved in pristine form along with the natural settings in deep and thick woods. It is well connected with major cities of India by Air, Rail and by Road.

About Conference

Literature and Media both are very significant for society to build a nation. Literature determines our history, memory, the notion of state, people, culture, civilization, and languages. It provides evidences and experiences, narratives of generations and also reflects identities, while the roles and responsibilities of media have a broad sense for building nation. Media is considered as the fourth pillar of the society as it has the great responsibility to represent all the countrymen equally beyond the bias of caste, class, creeds, gender, region and religions what the Preamble of the Indian Constitution signifies. In addition, it has a great responsibility for society to educate, entertain and create awareness amongst people because media has the right to criticize. Justifications are picturized amongst by the legislature and the executive body. It is also the duty of media to eradicate evil things from society such as communalism, casteism, superstitions, and discrimination against women, tribals, dalits and minorities. Featuring news contents about the poverty of the nation, unemployment problems, public health issues, good education and malnourishment of children will be a part of the discussions during the conference.
