

MATS School of Life Science celebrates: "National Science Day 2013"

MATS School of Life Science department organized National Science Day 2013 with the theme 'Genetically Modified Crops and Food Security' which aim was, to spread a message about the significance of scientific applications in the daily life of the people. On this occasion students of the department displayed scientific models, charts, and poster on the basis of the themes and concepts. Senior faculty of the department Mr.V.P. Roy shared all the issues and new implementation of technologies for the development of the GMOs. He also explained the Importance of the Intellectual Property Rights for the biosafety of GMOs. All the students and the faculty members were shared their views on GMOs, there advantages and disadvantages. Vice Chancellor and Registrar of MATS University shared their views and encouraged this type of activity in near future also.

